SUMMARY

Former college quarterback and 7th round pick who is used predominantly as a Slot receiver. Short in stature with average build with good quickness and change of direction. His solid play speed allows him to make plays in the passing game. Has good burst off the LOS and uses lateral agility to beat the press. Creates separation at the top of his route by mixing up the speed of his breaks and with subtle upper body movement to manipulate the technique of the defender. Shows the ability to diagnose coverage quickly, and adjust his routes to get open. His catching ability, concentration, and tracking skills are good and are evident while running option and intermediate routes. Uses short area quickness to elude defenders to get yards after the catch. Displays a passion and intensity in his game and these traits show up in late game situations and on 3rd down. Has trouble fighting through a hard press with hand use and technique because he lacks functional strength. He is inconsistent at adjusting to low thrown balls on out routes and while settling in voids of zone defenses. Does not hold anchor in run blocking and can get driven backward. Lacks breakaway speed to run away from the defense on bubble screens, quick slants, and option routes. Overall, he is a very quick receiver who relies on his great change of direction, his understanding of coverage schemes and route concepts to create separation and make plays in the passing game he will fit into a system designed to take advantage of his quickness and agility to attack the middle of the field by using option routes and the quick passing game.
